What is CSA?

CSA stands for “community supported agriculture.” It is a new approach to our food system that strengthens the bond between farmers and the communities they serve. Community members commit in advance to support a farm through their food purchases. Farmers commit to supply community members with a good variety of wholesome produce.

CSA farmers are able to offer the freshest produce money can buy because their consumers have purchased the produce in advance, so it never has to sit on a shelf or travel thousands of miles to market.

Shared risk . . .

shared reward

Farming is a very risky business enterprise. Community Supported Agriculture members help stabilize and secure a future for farms in their communities by sharing this risk.

So... if it's a hot summer, members will get lots of tomatoes and cucumbers, if it rains all season they might have to make do with lettuce and carrots.

How our CSA works.

- ✓ Shares are for a 20 week season, late May through early October
- ✓ Shares cost $500 and include a variety of common vegetables plus a few more exotic ones and occasional fruit. Payment is in advance (contact us about installment options).
- ✓ We can pair members who wish to share a share. Typically this means one member will pick up the share on odd weeks and the other on even weeks. Pairs must pick up at the same location.
- ✓ We deliver pre-packed shares for pick up: at the farm, the Legacy Salmon Creek Farmers Market, and in the 100 block of West 28th in Vancouver.
- ✓ Winter Storage Vegetable Shares are $150 and are for pick up at the farm in mid-November.

The Farmers

Diane and Jim Hunter have owned and operated Hunters' Greens Farm in Brush Prairie since 1996. We have offered CSA shares since 2001. We farm following sustainable practices without using pesticides or synthetic fertilizers.

Jim is a lifelong student of agriculture and a community activist. Diane raised a family and kept books for a small business before pursuing her dream of rescuing historic buildings and abandoned pets.

Jim and Diane aim to demonstrate a simple sustainable lifestyle through their farming and rescue efforts.

Our Green World. Our work at Hunters' Greens extends beyond growing vegetables. Whether you eat our vegetables or not, you can support our broader work with a donation. You can specify what you wish your donation to support; whether it's food for a family in need, a home for a wayward pet, habitat for wildlife, policy advocacy for a more sustainable food system, or historical preservation; we'll put your resources to work.
